

SA 302 tax calculations

General Features

01 January 2018

The CIOT and ATT recently asked members why they might still need to contact HMRC for SA302 calculations. We have sent the feedback we received to HMRC, and will keep members informed of any further developments in this area.

HMRC recently raised concerns with professional bodies that they are still receiving significant call volumes from agents requesting hard copy SA302 tax calculations to verify self-employed income for mortgage applications. This is despite the fact HMRC have been working with lenders for some years to get them to accept tax computations printed out from individual's online HMRC accounts or commercial software. The list of providers that will accept such tax calculations without recourse to paper copies from HMRC can be found at <https://tinyurl.com/yc3ragnc>.

HMRC's concern is that these calls are taking up time that could be used to deal with other queries. The printed SA302s are then sent second class, which causes delays for borrowers.

By far the main reason members gave us for calling HMRC was that paper SA302s are still being requested by mortgage brokers, who seem to be unaware of the agreement between HMRC and the Council of Mortgage Lenders. Members receive a mixed response when challenging brokers with some agreeing to accept SA302s/Tax Year Overviews printed from commercial software whilst others refusing to accept anything but a paper copy directly from HMRC. Some members reported that lenders are also often unaware of the agreement. Members were also concerned that challenging brokers about the updated procedure was often seen by their clients as being obstructive, and risked affecting client relations.

Several members suggested that it was time that SA302s were readily available to download from HMRC online accounts for all taxpayers who submit a self-assessment tax return, not just those using HMRC's software.

Other reasons for needing to contact HMRC included:

- Not acting for the client for the relevant period and so not having access to the calculation. This can particularly be an issue for five year farmer's averaging calculations where a number of earlier years information may be required;
- The agent's software not putting the reference SA302 on the tax calculations for years earlier than 2015-16;
- The SA302 being requested by an overseas tax authority that is only prepared to accept a paper HMRC copy.

Guidance on mortgage lenders and financial references is included on the CIOT and ATT websites.
